DURATION

The 88th edition of the Bol d'Or serves as the second 24-hour race of the 2025 EWC season, returning to Circuit Paul Ricard for the 32nd time. The circuit's 5.67-kilometer layout includes the formidable 1.8-kilometer Mistral Straight, a key overtaking zone where riders will exceed 300 km/h for 20 seconds. This high-speed stretch makes tire choice crucial for performance, both day and night. The race, which is traditionally the season finale, can also be known for its unpredictable weather and gusty winds, adding another layer of challenge for riders.

The race starts at 15:00 CET on Saturday, September 20th, and will run for 24 hours. With sunset at 19:47 and sunrise at 07:15, riders will endure nearly 12 hours of racing in darkness.
